Canadians Nab Accused Killer

American Was Object Of 11-Month Search

DETROIT (P)-Ewing Scott, retired Los Angeles investment broker sought for 11 months by police in two countries, said today he will fight every effort to return him to California to face charges of murdering his wealthy socialite wife.

The distinguished looking 60year-old Californian said that charges he killed his wife were "asinine." "That's just plain ridiculous and stupid," he said.

Scott was nabbed Monday night in a routine customs check at the Canadian border when he tried to drive an unlicensed car into Can-

He insisted at first that he was Lewis E. Stewart, a retired businessman, but admitted afterward to U.S. immigration officials that he was the man sought by California police. Canadian authorities had been asked to watch for Scott on the belief he had fled the United States.

Scott was arraigned on a fugitive warrant Tuesday in Detroit Federal District Court. Judge Thomas P. Thornton ordered him held pending a hearing May 7 on removal to California.

California authorities said the state was acting as quickly as possible to extradite him.

Scott's 63-year-old wife, the five-times-married Mrs. Evelyn Throsby Scott, disappeared from her fashionable Bel Air home in Los Angeles May 16, 1955. Police later found her false teeth and glasses in the back yard of the Scott home. Scott denied any knowledge of her disappearance.

He jumped $25,000 bail and van-Ished in May 1956 after he was indicted by a grand jury on charges of mishandling his wife's $600,000 estate. Five months after his disappearance the county grand jury at Los Angeles indicted him on a charge of murder.

FBI agents who searched Scott Tuesday said they found $10,000 in $100 and $20 bills in a money belt he was wearing.

Scott refused to say where he had been the last 11 months. He admitted nothing about his wife's disappearance.

My innocence will be estab. lished at the proper time," he

-Luke XXIII:47

A centurion, as the name indicates, was an officer in the Roman army, who commanded a hundred soldiers. Scripture tells us very little of the Centurion who rode at the head of the tragic procession which escorted lesus to Calvary to be crucified.

We know that he rode a horse and that after him, among the Roman legionaries, came Jesus and the two thieves who were to be executed with Him.

Following them came the jeering mass of men, women, and even children who pressed around Him with words of cruel mockery and abuse.

It is evident from the hints given us in the Biblical account that the Centurion, like Pilate, had no enthusiasm for his task. From time to time, he turned around to look back at the Man of Sorrows.

Physically depleted by the previous night of questioning and beatings, His face haggard and blotched with blood, Jesus struggled under the weight of His Cross.

When He fell beneath its weight, the Centurion ordered two soldiers to help Him back to His feet. Then the Roman officer looked about in the crowd for someone to bear the Cross.

On one face he saw pity and grief and disgust. It was the face of Simon, a man from Cyrenia.

So he commanded the stranger to bear the Cross. Simon gladly complied, and the sad procession shuffled on toward the limestone hill outside Jerusalem. Because the powdery white mound resembled a skull, it was called Golgotha.

With growing uneasiness, the Centurion carried out his orders. But as the grisly business proceeded, he noted a strange oppression within himself. Or had he imagined it? Looking upon the One who hung limp upon the crude wooden cross, blood still flowing from His wounds, the Centurion asked himself: Why is this man so different from others who have been crucified?

Then a strange awareness came upon him, a realization that "Certainly, this was a righteous man."

Sliding Scale

With the passing of April 15, interest in income taxes will wane. But there will continue to be interest in government spending, which is the other side of government taxing.

There could be no government spending at inflated rates without inflated rates of taxing. There could be no inflated rates of taxing, without the sliding-scale principle of income taxation. It is that simple.

If all taxpayers were asked to grin and bear confiscatory taxes on incomes above the subsistence level, the government would have a tax revolt on its hands. It already has on its hands more complaints than it can handle without fear of the consequences in Congress.

The aim of the complaints is not relief from taxes, but relief from the further growth of big government.

Immediate tax reduction is out of the question. It is not out of the question, however, that the growth of government might be checked.

The effect would be the same in the long run. If government spending could be stabilized at a point closer to 65 billion a year than 75 billion a year, the normal growth of enterprise and population would bring tax relief in the long run. There would be government surpluses to justify tax and debt reductions.

But if government spending is allowed to go up each year, it will absorb the increased yield from enterprise and population growth. There never can be any tax relief. It is the best of all possible reasons for hammering away at the necessity of lopping off government

Fixed Date For Easter

There will be only four more Easters in the 20th century as late as Easter this year. In 1962, again in 1973 and finally in 1984, Easter will fall on April 22. In 2000, it will fall on April 23.

It fell on April 21 only twice before this year's date - in 1935 and 1946. The latest it can fall under any circumstances is April 25. This happened the last time in 1943 and will not happen again until 2038.

The timing of Easter was determined by the First Council of Christian churches at Nicaea in 325 AD and was based on phases of the moon, to give pilgrims to Jerusalem moonlight during their after-dark travels.

In other words, the wide variation in the date was the result of an arbitrary decision made hundreds of years ago by persons seeking a solution for a problem in security for travelers. It is related to the festival of Easter only in an indirect way.

But because it sets a variable date for a deeply significant occasion the outworn formula has a tremendous impact on millions of people who would prefer to have Easter fall on a fixed day, the same as Christmas. There is no reason why this should not be done, except the inertia of human nature, the skittishness of lawmakers about religious matters and the awkwardness of getting an international agreement on a religious matter.

The United Nations some day could surmount these obstacles. Easter should be a fixed date in late April.

Who Would Object?

Gov. O'Neill tackled the problem of Ohio's policeless state in a speech to the Cleveland Bar Assn. last Wednesday. Why should it be this way? What accounts for the great emptiness in Ohio between the county sheriffs and the National Guard?

The state can deal with a public emergency by calling out the Guard. It can deal with routine crime by relying on county sheriffs and local police. It can handle highway traffic and protect state property with the Ohio Highway

But when there is a special police job too big for the sheriff and too small for the National Guard, Ohio's hands are tied. The state has no agency for handling police - work assignments performed in other states by a statewide police force.

It would be helpful to know who would object to having a state police force in Ohio. It would be helpful to know who would object to broadening the power of the Ohio Highway Patrol to include such power.

Once the source of the opposition had been identified, Ohioans would know more about the reason for the great emptiness between the sheriffs and the National Guard.

If no opposition showed itself, there would be no reason to prolong the emptiness.

We've often wondered why little kids don't ask the questions a parent can answer.

" It's no wonder health leaves some folks, the way they neglect it year after year.

Decision In Wisconsin

Letter Of Law Prevails In Discrimination Case

ago would not have merited any notice whatso- basis.

David Lawrence must accept Negroes in their membership. So the court decided that, while it is just too bad that such discrimination exists, it isn't a violation of the law of the state nor the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Now, the members of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin could have reached around the world and found many a writer on sociological subjects who would have told them that failure to include Negroes in a voluntary organization of any kind is psychologically bad and creates a feeling of "inferiority" among those who are the victims of discrimination.

THE COURT COULD have said that sociology is more important than law and that times have changed anyway and that the Fourteenth Amendment should be construed as requiring prohibition of any form of discrimination.

The Supreme Court of Wisconsin. however, didn't do or say any of these things because the six judges, led by Judge Timothy Brown, who rendered the opinion, simply felt that they were bound to stick to what the law said and, if it omitted anything, they were not supposed

True enough, Judge E. T. Fairchild, the sole dissenting judgewro perhaps will be regarded by some observers as more "modern" than the other judges-did say the remedy should be supplied anyhow by the court. He wrote:

"To be the butt of social discrimination is unpleasant in high degree but to be denied the economic opportunity to work out one's destiny as best he can, soley because of a racial or a religious difference, impairs the very substance of citizenship itself.

"Perhaps the degree of the impairment is so great and the character of the rights impaired so fundamental that the wrong must be recognized and remedied by the judicial branch even in the absence of action by the legislature."

JUDGE FAIRCHILD is at least has behind him, of course, the precedent established by the Supreme Court of the United States, which - in the desegregation de-

> There have been many instances and couldn't of judicial usurpation in many countries based on the same

If the people of Wisconsin, of course, want to end discrimination by organizations described as "voluntary," they can do so by a constitutional amendment.

Indeed, the argument made in the majority opinion in the Wisconsin case notes that the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution contains nothing to restrain a labor union from discriminating in the matter of membership on any ground it pleases.

Judge Brown pointed out that, from the language of the Fourteenth Amendment, "It would seem to be clear that only discrimination by state action is within is contemplation." He added:

"The present discrimination is by private persons acting privately. It cannot fairly be said to be the action of the state and, therefore, its practice is not prohibited by the Fourteenth Amend-

IF THE SUPREME COURT of the United States upholds that interpretation, it means that bus lines operated privately or schools or social clubs which exclude persons for racial or religious reasons are on safe ground in doing

If, on the other hand, the highest court in the land says that even "voluntary" organizations cannot discriminate on a racial or religious basis, then the way is opened to compel all labor unions, as well as those exclusive clubs which enjoy some measure of tax protection, to admit anyone otherwise qualified.

What will make the case particularly difficult to decide when it reaches the top court in Washington is the sanction given by the Taft-Hartley Act to the modified "closed shop," oherwise known as the "union shop."

Under this law, the employer is compelled to fire any new employe who doesn't join the union in

The nation's sewerage system must be in a bad way, too. In 1956 the Health and Welfare Department didn't find it necessary to spend a dime to build waste treatment plants. But this year it's spending about seven million dollars for that purpose, and next lion, if you please.

NEW YORK is generally supposed to be more up to date than most communities, but only a few days ago did it take its last trolley car out of service. This reminds us that the horse car had disappeared from our home town when we were a kid, yet when we came to the big city years later, they were still running in parts of Manhattan. Incidentally we get extra nostalgic over the trolley car, which, it seems to us, offered a ride away ahead of anything the average city busline can give. The comfort of passengers was a top consideration, with wonderful "open cars" run through the summertime; safety was so paramount that the law required an operator whose mind was not to be distracted by any other duties and a conductor who took fares, gave information, helped passengers on and off politely, etc.

ANY SUGGESTION of a one-man-trolley worker who would, in addition to running the car, have to take on the added duties of a conductor, was sure to be howled down or laughed off. Rarely did a trolley roar by anybody to make time or because it was crowded, and the gruff, discourteous operator was short-

Our earliest boyhood recollection in the transportation field is of a trolley on the Sylvan Ave. line, past our house, that had a stove amidships in which a fire was kept during cold weather but there is a vague memory of horse cars on the Chapel St. line.

Herb Score Gives Up 7 Hits, Walks 11

CLEVELAND (P) - Before the Cleveland Indians can demonstrate that their new manager, Kerby Farrell, has put new life into them on the base paths, they'll have to find a softer touch than Chicago's ace southpaw, Billy

Only four Indians got hits off Pierce, and only rookie Roger Maris hit him after the fifth inning Tuesday when the Tribe lost its opener to the White Sox 3-2 in

Maris, a 22-year-old who entered professional baseball in his home city of Fargo, N. D. in 1953, did his best to let the 31,145 fans see some of the base running action Farrell emphasized in spring

After waving at a bad outside pitch for a third strike his first time up, Maris delivered three crisp singles. On the first of these, in the fourth inning, he was sacrificed to second by Chico Carrasquel and scored from there on George Strickland's single.

"I was shaking some the first time at the plate," Maris said, "but after that it was all right." The new left fielder has been described by Farrell as "a good two strike hitter," and two of his singles Tuesday came after Pierce had two strikes on him.
